Forked Tongues: Galician, Basque and Catalan Women's Poetry in Translations by Irish Writers

Book Launch

Galicia, the Basque country and Catalonia have often found in Ireland an "inspiring Other" whether for political, social or cultural reasons. This anthology engages in an intercultural dialogue which redefines and strengthens the literary bonds among these communities. A selection of the most prominent Galician, Basque and Catalan contemporary women poets have their verse recreated in English by Irish writers. Together they enrich the European literary scene by celebrating its diversity.

Edited by Manuela Palacios and published by Shearsman, Forked Tongues features work by Pilar Pallarés, Chus Pato, Lupe Gómez Arto, Yolanda Castaño, María do Cebreiro (Galicia); Itxaro Borda, Miren Agur Meabe, Castillo Suárez, Leire Bilbao (Basque Country); Vinyet Panyella, Susanna Rafart, Gemma Gorga, Mireia Calafell (Catalonia).

Translations by: Maurice Harmon, Lorna Shaughnessy, Anne Le Marquand Hartigan, Máighr ad Medbh, Mary O'Donnell, Celia de Fr ine, Catherine Phil MacCarthy, Susan Connolly, Paddy

Bushe, Michael O'Loughlin, Paula Meehan, Keith Payne, Theo Dorgan. Translation drafts by Kirsty Hooper, Diana Cullell and Juan Arana-Cobos.

The book launch will take place at the Instituto Cervantes in Dublin on Thursday the 28th of February at 6pm

Forthcoming Translations

Translations of poems by Galician poet Chus Pato in: Forked Tongues (Ed. Manuela Palacios. Shearsman Press, 2013)

Writers from Galicia, the Basque country and Catalonia have often found in Ireland an "inspiring Other" whether for political, social or cultural reasons. This anthology engages in an intercultural dialogue in order to redefine and strengthen the literary bonds among these communities. A selection of the most prominent Galician, Basque and Catalan contemporary poets have their verse recreated in English by Irish writers and, as minoritized languages benefit from the international dissemination which the English language favours, the writers involved in this project forge new "glocal" identities which enrich the European literary scene by celebrating its diversity.

A bilingual anthology of this kind gives the vernacular languages the visibility they deserve and reveals translation as an indispensable actor in intercultural negotiations as it corrects imbalances between literary systems. On the other hand, this selection of women poets from Galicia, the Basque country and Catalonia pays homage to these women's decisive contribution to the renovation of their respective literary traditions. Both women and men poets from Ireland lend their voices to their fellow writers and join forces to grant them the international recognition they merit. The writers who participate in this anthology are, among others: Chus Pato, María do Cebreiro, Yolanda Castaño, Miren Agur Meabe, Castillo Suárez, Susanna Rafart, Vinyet Panyella, Maurice Harmon, Mary O'Donnell, Theo Dorgan and Lorna Shaughnessy.
